Special Notes

- Please review the Advising Center website for information on how to declare the BSF.
- BSF students with a second major in Economics cannot earn credit for both FINA 3301 Money and Capital Markets and ECON 2121 Financial Economics as these are considered course equivalents. Students interested in the content of these courses should take FINA 3301.
- The number of second major courses varies by department.
- Students must take two WID courses after completing UW 1020 in separate semesters. Courses with WID versions have been identified above. Students may use finance major courses, second major courses, general education courses, or electives to satisfy WID requirements.
- Students pursuing a second major in Economics should speak with an advisor about how many courses may overlap with the Finance Major requirements.
